

Although I would describe myself as a street photographer, I am also interested in other genres. At school I studied Art and Design. My Art teacher had a saying “simplicity is the key note to good design.” I have tried to follow that doctrine in everything I do. When I apply that concept of simplicity to photography, it could be interpreted as minimalism.

My Buildings project combines minimalism with architectural landscapes.